

Am I entitled to free prescriptions?

People with diabetes treated with tablets or injections are entitled to free prescriptions. To avoid paying charges for your medication, you need to have a valid 'medical exemption certificate'. Other people may also be entitled to free prescriptions if they meet certain conditions. For more information to see if you are exempt please visit:

If you require an exemption certificate please speak to a receptionist at the practice, as the NHS will only accept official documents. These may also be known as the FP92A prescription exemption form.
